Transformation time as India chases agility

Agility is critical: more than ever, you need to hire those you can see becoming your leaders of the future.

Nicolas Dumoulin
Managing Director
Michael Page India

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to India's first Salary Benchmark report for this new decade. Despite what we see as short-term clouds on the global horizon, we see good things ahead. With India's strong 10-year average annual GDP growth of 6.4%, low inflation and positive macro-economic stability, we expect more exciting times ahead for this remarkable nation.

For Michael Page India, digital transformation is a hot topic for many clients. Naturally, many firms are at different stages in terms of platforms and technology adoption, and it will remain a dominant theme for 2020 and beyond. In terms of digital transformation's biggest impact on hiring? The need for agility and flexibility of your top talent: more than ever, you need to hire today for those you can see becoming your leaders of the future.

We believe India's disciplines are well-positioned to continue to grow, particularly in Digital and Technology hiring. As sectors like e-commerce, mobile and gaming flex their new growth potential, we expect some degree of tightening in terms of match-ready talent. Otherwise overall, the market has an ample supply of good talent for new roles.

The recent opening of our new Bangalore office is an exciting milestone for Michael Page in India. With 37 of India's 50 potential unicorn (privately held start-ups valued at over US$1 billion) businesses based in the city, we feel Bangalore gives us a valuable opportunity to help power India's next wave of growth companies.

As we explored during our successful Powering India's Future campaign, a key component to all companies is the leadership function. Mindful that leadership is as complex and demanding now as ever, we've put extra attention this year into looking at the Employee Experience, and what tomorrow's talent expects from a new career opportunity in 2020. We wish everyone an exciting and successful year ahead.
